wolf creek Legacy

Wolf Creek Legacy, first published as a series in Allied News, is our one chance to see how it used to be here on the banks of Wolf Creek.

Lillian Reynolds Reeher carefully recorded in longhand the stories of local residents, who were in their eighties and nineties in the early 1980s. They had a deep relationship with Wolf Creek as did their parents, grandparents and great-grandparents. Enhanced by careful research, Wolf Creek Legacy combines their stories into the definitive oral history of the Grove City area. They are gone now but their stories live on.

excerpt from wolf creek legacy

“They began by living in close harmony with the earth and the creek.”

“Wolf Creek, at one time, was more than an asset to the community of Grove City. It was the main reason for the establishment of the community which came to be known as Pine Grove. Bits and pieces of information from the archives of the Mercer County Historical Society form a jigsaw puzzle through the center of which runs Wolf Creek.”
